

2012年12月大学英语六级真题答案与解析（答案合辑）

说明：本次考试首次采用“多题多卷”，不同试卷在阅读选词填空(47-51)、翻译(82-86)等题型上存在卷一/卷二差异。以下以新东方在线 (koolearn) 汇总为主干（最常见卷），并附人民网翻译卷一/卷二差异。听力短对话(11-18)与长对话(19-25)各来源多以原文转述给出，未以统一选项字母完整收录，详见下方标注。

一、写作 (Part I Writing)

题目 A (常见卷) : Man and Computer 对引言 "The real danger is not that the computer will think like man, but man will think like the computer." 发表自己的观点。

范文 (标准版)

Ever since the birth of it, the computer has largely changed human beings' life and there has been a hot debate about its effects on humans. Undeniably, computers have taken the place of humans in many areas and it seems that computers begin to think like man, but this does not necessarily lead to the danger that man will think like computers.

The reasons, in my opinion, are as follows. Firstly, when computers release human from repetitive tasks, humans themselves can spend more time on creative works, such as scientific research, which require imagination and cannot be completed by computers. Meanwhile, thanks to computers, humans get more spare time with their friends and family, which enhances their happiness. Moreover, even though computers can work automatically, the premise is that the program, which is written by humans, has been installed in it.

In conclusion, humans, unlike computers, have creative ability, emotional desires and social bounds. Thus, I don't think that there will be the danger that man will begin to think like the computer.

It is believed that the computer is bringing the world into a brand new era. At the time the computer was invented, scientists, marveling at its calculating speed, felt that they had created a miracle. Nowadays, the function of the computer is no longer confined to calculation; it permeates people's daily lives and has become an inseparable part of human society.

People become so heavily dependent on computers that it is hard to imagine the life without computers. Therefore, some people are worried that "The real danger is not that the computer will think like man, but man will think like the computer." Their concern does make sense. Indeed, some people spend such a long time working on computers that they have few interactions with people in real life. According to a research, too many hours in front of a computer may lead to a poker face and interpersonal isolation. This fact should arouse our attention, because unlike computers, human beings are social creatures that need emotional connections with others.

Yet, it is also unnecessary for us to be overwhelmed by the negative impacts of computers. After all, we humans are intelligent and will be able to figure out better ways to make improvements.

另有 B 卷题目 "On Maintaining Trust" (关于人际交往中信任的维护), 为另一套多题多卷试题, 本合辑未收录其范文。
