五、翻译参考译文 (Translation: 成语)

真题：成语是汉语中一种独特的表达方式，大多由四个字组成。它们言简意赅、结构固定，却能生动传达深刻的思想。许多成语源自中国古代典籍，常与神话、传说或历史事件有关。如果不了解某条成语的出处，就很难把握其真正含义。因此，学习成语有助于人们更好地理解中国传统文化。成语广泛用于日常交谈和文学作品中，运用得当可使语言更有表现力、交流更有效。

参考译文： Chinese idioms are unique expressions in Chinese which are mostly composed of four characters. In spite of their extreme conciseness and fixed format, they are capable of delivering profound ideas vividly. These idioms, which largely originated from the literary works in ancient China, are usually related with myths, legends or historical events. If one fails to know the origin of a certain idiom, he will find it very hard to grasp its actual meaning. Consequently, learning idioms will help people understand traditional Chinese cultures better. Widely used in daily conversations and literary works, idioms, if used properly, can make one's language more expressive and his communication more effective.

六、写作范文 (Writing: The Importance of Motivation and Methods in Learning)

When it comes to learning, there is a famous Chinese saying which goes "Learning without thinking leads to confusion; thinking without learning ends in danger." Evidently, it is meant to tell us that learning methods are as important as hard work. I totally agree with it. Besides, I insist that in addition to diligence and methods, motivation in learning should also be paid attention to. As for me, motivation is an indispensable part of learning, because without motivation, you won't start to learn at all. Even if you have started studying, without motivation that drives you to keep going, you may easily give up when faced with difficulties. With motivation, we also need the right way to learn. In the learning process, hard work is not enough. If we don't attach importance to learning methods, we may fall into the dilemma of studying mechanically. Instead, with effective learning methods, there will be twice the result with half the effort. In brief, motivation and methods are critical to successful learning. Therefore, only when we are clearly aware of this, can we achieve good learning results by making efforts.
